MESSAGE FROM THE COLLEGE PRINCIPAL

John Hamey
College Principal

In a speech at the Melbourne Institute's Economic and Social Outlook Conference last year, Malcolm Turnbull outlined the importance of encouraging a culture of innovation in Australia and providing students in schools with the skills they need in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics to understand and become familiar with the machine languages they will need in the future. In his address stated, 'We need to be more innovative, we need to be more technologically sophisticated. What we need to do is embrace change, be adaptable, flexible and innovative.' Our graduates are entering a world waiting with opportunity and optimism requiring of them an agility and willingness to embrace change often, quickly and competently.

Equally, our graduates need to be able to find creative solutions to complex problems through a sophisticated and seamless integration of the thinking skills taught and acquired through each of the traditional disciplines. Further, they need to be able to communicate these solutions through a range of platforms and mediums in a way that is erudite, cohesive, and yet simplistic and accessible. Innovators who cannot communicate complex information in this way are not likely to succeed or harness the required energy to support their innovation and potential.

The achievement of our students as detailed in this booklet affirms our student's readiness to embrace the world that awaits them. They have demonstrated academic excellence and the 'stretch' to engage in integrated thinking. They are articulate, confident communicators who care equally about the social benefits of innovation and work as they do about economic growth and development. During their time at school they have embraced the importance of chesed as evidenced in their commitment to community service, a strong engagement with civic and Jewish life and for many, a commitment to advocate for better social outcomes for those that cannot do this alone or for themselves. They are young women and men who bring much nachas to their families and our community – not only because of their outstanding achievements across a range of endeavors but because of their character, perseverance, commitment and care for one another.

We wish the class of 2016 b'hatzlacha and may great and wonderful things await them. In the words of the blessing their parents pray over them each Shabbat: May G-d Bless you and guard you. May the light of G-d shine upon you, and may G-d be gracious to you. May the presence of G-d be with you and give you peace.

MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN OF JEWISH LIFE & LEARNING

Rabbi Benji Levy
Dean of Jewish Life & Learning

School's over and you have taken another meaningful step closer to the understanding of who you are. I urge you to peer beyond the digits that comprise your ATAR and celebrate the skills you have acquired, the knowledge you have gained and most importantly the person you have become. Look through the pages in this book and you will be humbled by the tremendous success that you and your classmates have achieved. It is the integrity with which you achieved success, the determination you demonstrated in accomplishing your goals and your commitment to the Jewish values shared by your family and the broader Moriah family that will remain the resounding and most valuable achievement of your schooling career. This will form the foundation of who you really can become as you enter a new world of possibility.

Keep bringing nachas to all of us, building meaningful relationships, being proud Jews, taking advantage of good opportunities and fulfilling your incredible potential! Just over a decade ago, I stood in your shoes and wore them on my way out of one of the finest educational institutions.

Over time I have changed my shoes and walked right back in – while you may change paths, never change who you are or your ultimate destiny and destination.

Welcome to the club of graduates, make your mark and keep the keshet.

Mazal Tov for now and b'hatzlacha for the future!

'My most significant achievements during High School include being chosen as School Captain, being awarded Colours for Academic Excellence and being part of the Future Problem Solving Team that competed in the USA at the International Finals. Moriah has educated me about my history as a Jewish person and has guided me towards my future Jewish life. I have had the privilege of experiencing what it means to be Jewish through programs like IST, Counterpoint and Shabbatonim. My special memories of High School include building close bonds with students and teachers. My main aspiration beyond school is to make a difference.'

Purim celebrations, Music Festivals and the da Vinci Decathlon are special memories for me. My message to the Class of 2016 is - dreams don't work unless you do.'
