

Moriah College is proud to endorse SAJE (Sydney Academy of Jewish Education) as a program under the auspices of the Sydney Beth Din, that fosters a warm and welcoming environment, supporting participants in their conversion journey every step of the way. SAJE offers guidance through the intricate process of study and observance necessary for a meaningful integration into the Jewish faith that is fully aligned with our College ethos.

SAJE, launched as an educational body last October, is committed to helping guide its students through the process of conversion, with group classes, inspiring educators and mentors and a modular structured course of learning.

SAJE's visionary and benefactor Harry Triguboff OA, was inspired to help create SAJE to keep people connected to the community. There are already 70 participants in the first cohort of classes that began towards the end of 2023.

For those who have chosen to join, SAJE is committed to providing support and encouragement to ensure a smooth path that includes:

- Personalised guidance. SAJE walks those who undertake the program through every stage of their journey.
- A supportive community. Participants join with like-minded individuals and feel the warmth of a welcoming community.
- Comprehensive learning. Access to resources and opportunities designed to deepen understanding and connection to Judaism and the Jewish community.

Moriah is proud to endorse SAJE as a program that fosters a warm and welcoming environment supporting participants every step of the way, and offering guidance through the intricate process of study and observance necessary for a meaningful integration into the Jewish faith that is fully aligned with our College ethos.

We are excited that two of our educational leaders, College Rabbi, Gad Krebs and Head of Jewish Life, Talya Wiseman, are part of the teaching team at SAJE.

“As a teacher at SAJE, it is an incredible thing to be part of someone's journey to becoming Jewish. To learn with them and to be a small part of this significant turning point in their lives, is truly an honour and profoundly rewarding.” says Talya

Rabbi Krebs says that he is equally inspired by this new program. “With SAJE, there is a clear path to joining the Jewish people, which will open the door to many who previously might have felt it shut. As one of the SAJE educators, I feel privileged to be part of that journey.”

If you are interested in learning more about how your participation in SAJE could support your child's future studies at Moriah College, please don't hesitate to reach out to our Enrolments team.